

How to Deal with Speeding Tickets in Ontario in 2022

Driving is a privilege nowadays. And no one wants to lose it due to an occasional speeding incident. Hiring a traffic lawyer is the best option in this case.

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA,
December 20, 2021 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Getting a speeding ticket issued by a police officer on the road is not a very pleasant experience. But the truth is that it might happen with anybody. In fact, it happens with the majority of Canadians these days because of recent traffic law changes, when there is a fine line between speeding and stunt driving charges.

After this incident, one of the most widespread questions that people have is "Should I fight it?" or "Is it worth hiring a lawyer to get professional help?". The quick answer is - yes, you should always consult with legal professionals to learn everything about your charges in order to make the most educated choices going forward.

After people decide to fight their ticket, another question arises - "How to fight it? Alone or with professional help?"

There are cases when people defend their rights by themselves in court and reduce their charges. But there are also a lot of instances when they end up convicted of a traffic violation with all ensuing consequences. It happens because of various reasons including cases, where people just don't have relevant experience and don't know what to say or moreover say something that puts them in a difficult position.

That's why it is generally recommended to resort to professional help in cases like that. Because this is quite a specific area, the average person can make missteps that might end up costing too much (and this is not only about money).

Objectively speaking, hiring a paralegal or a traffic ticket lawyer will be by far the best option for most Canadians in 2022 because of several reasons.

1 - It's less expensive than you think

It's not a secret that sometimes fees for traffic lawyer services can be higher than tickets themselves. Many people think it's cheaper and easier to pay the ticket in this case. But this is an entirely wrong belief!

The majority is unaware of the severe outcomes that entail receiving at least one ticket in Canada. They forget or don't understand that you automatically plead guilty if you pay your ticket. If you're guilty, you're facing all the consequences, including fines and highly inflated insurance rates.

When it comes to insurance after getting a speeding conviction, premiums jump faster than the needle on your speedometer. Rates can be increased by 25-300% for the next three years. Fighting could be more expensive than the ticket, but it can save your money on insurance for years.

2 - A professional can help you to keep your driving record clean

A conviction for speeding leads to 0-6 demerit points, up to $1,000 in fines and insurance rates increase. Accumulation of 15 demerit points leads to licence suspension. Speeding infractions in a "Community Safety Zone" may result in a summons to appear in court and a licence suspension for 30 days.

Traffic ticket paralegal knows all the nuances and can develop personalized defence strategy according to your situation. It can help to reduce the fine amount or get your ticket dismissed entirely. And, accordingly, this will help to keep your driving record clean and minimize penalties.

3 - Traffic ticket lawyer has a substantial experience

A traffic ticket lawyer or paralegal has deep knowledge and tremendous experience with traffic violation cases compared to an average person. Your traffic lawyer knows just about everything there is to know regarding traffic law. They're always on your side.

Moreover, they study each judge's & prosecutor's tactics and approaches, negotiation styles etc. They master their craft, gain invaluable knowledge and experience while trying to understand a given issue from different angles and points of view. This significantly increases your chances to get victory in court.
