Market Opportunity:

Ammunition used to be incredibly heavy to carry for long periods of time, which limited soldiers' fighting skills. It was necessary to reduce the caliber's size so that more ammo could be carried, making shooting more comfortable. As a result, lighter and smaller rounds were developed, resulting in lower bullet performance. To address these shortcomings, new cartridges such as the 6.5 mm Grendel were designed.

Market Segmentation:

By Type: Small Caliber Ammunition, Medium Caliber Ammunitions, Large Caliber Ammunitions, Artillery Ammunitions, Mortar Ammunitions, Naval Ammunition, Aircraft Ammunition

By Application: Defense (Naval, Army, Air Force, Special Forces), Homeland Security (Private Security Agencies, Federal Security Agencies), Others (Personal, R&D, entertainment, and fire services)

By Products: Small Army Ammunition, Rockets, Torpedoes, Missiles and Warheads, Bombs, Miscellaneous
