With my lecture "Embrace the Struggle" I want to inspire people with my artwork and story. How I went from being a bull rider to becoming a professional sculptor. I tell others being a bull rider

Go out there, follow the dreams that gives life passion. Life is too short not to!”

was great training for being a professional artist. Because the two things you need to be a good bull rider is confidence and belief and those are the same exact things you need to make it as an artist or in anything else. We never really know what can be done until we try. We need to look at struggles and challenges as opportunities that help us grow and become stronger. With the lessons and struggle of life we gain wisdom and experience growth. It is in the struggle where your strength is built and your character is forged and we become the person we are today! Remember, every “expert” was a beginner at some point in their life. Do
