significant advancement in such vehicles is their ability to take and re-route non-passenger traffic. In doing so, the risk of collision or accident is drastically reduced. Increasing technological developments in automobiles is playing a significant role in the growth of the autonomous car market. Growing spending in digital infrastructure and development in autonomous vehicle infrastructure is also contributing to the growth of the market. Other benefits such as reduced crash risks, improved safety, and increased road capacity offered by this car are again propelling the growth of the autonomous car market. An increasing number of partnerships and agreements among key players to introduce autonomous vehicles is further anticipated to augment the growth of the autonomous car market.
