100% Kona coffee farm Kona Earth donates a percentage of proceeds with their Care In Every Cup program.

HOLUALOA, HI, UNITED STATES, January 4, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- 100% Kona coffee farm Kona Earth makes giving back a priority. Their Care In Every Cup program donates a percentage of every purchase to their local, non-profit partner, Kohala Center.

As the new owners of Kona Earth Coffee, Steve and Joanie Wynn wanted to make giving back an integral part of their new business. The brand re-

As new owners, it is enormously satisfying to be able to give back in our first month in business. As we grow Kona Earth, we plan to grow this give-back initiative as well"

During the holiday season, a special gift item donated $5 of each purchase directly to Kohala Center and that, along with robust holiday sales, enabled the small family farm to donate $500.00.

Joanie Wynn said, "As new owners, it is enormously satisfying to be able to give back in our first month in business. As we grow Kona Earth, we plan to grow this give-back initiative as well, supporting local non-profits and the good works they do. That's what Care In Every Cup is all about."

Kona Earth's non-profit partner, Kohala Center, is an independent research, education, and 'aina (land) stewardship non-profit located in Waimea on the Big Island. They do important work protecting essential ecosystems on-island including the reefs, cloud forests, and farmland.

Cheryl Ka'uhane Lupenui, President and Chief Executive Officer of Kohala Center comments, "At The Kohala Center, we believe the more we know about where our food, water, ancestors and, even coffee come from, the better we will care for these precious resources. Thus, Care in Every Cup is a great partnership to join a community that engages respectfully with 'āina across generations here in Hawai'i!"

Kohala Center runs educational programs for young people interested in agriculture, so the Wynns hope that, in the future, there may be an opportunity for their farm to serve as a living laboratory for students interested in Kona coffee farming.

A HISTORY OF GIVING BACK

As in all of their business ventures, Steve and Joanie Wynn have always made giving back a priority. The Emmy award-winning husband and wife team previously ran San Francisco Bay Area production company Bayside Entertainment. During their several decades as video producers, they always took on pro bono projects to support local non-profits, primarily in their home of Marin County.

The pair also self-funded projects which highlighted and celebrated the spirit of voluntourism. "Journeys for Good" was a documentary project for public television that highlighted international volunteer opportunities in Africa, Cambodia, and Nicaragua.

Another project, "American Companies Give Back" was produced virtually during the 2020 Covid-19 pandemic lockdown. Hosted by TV personality Ken Bastida, the series highlighted a dozen companies that make giving back a priority. Using original Zoom interviews and company-provided footage, the companies profiled included Numi Tea, Credo Beauty, Flir, Wag, Kiva, Afar, Drip Drop, and TCC, a large Verizon retailer located with over 800 US locations.

With Kona Earth Coffee, the Wynns will continue to incorporate their video and storytelling skills to shine a spotlight on their non-profit partners. "As much as we love to give back monetarily, an equal part of our goal is to bring awareness to our non-profit partners", commented Steve. "As people learn about the good work that others are doing, they become inspired to get involved themselves."
