Global Office Furniture Market Trends:

Office Furniture Market

The market is primarily driven by a significant increase in the construction of commercial zones and IT parks. Numerous corporates and enterprises are taking initiatives to create an informal workplace with furnishings that would cater to the comfort of the employees. This assists in promoting social interaction among the employees and facilitating a collaborative and productive environment. In line with this, significant growth in the corporate sector is also providing a thrust to the market growth. Apart from this, a considerable rise in the number of start-ups and an increasing requirement for employment across the globe are acting as another major growth-inducing factor. Moreover, continual research and development (R&D) has enabled manufacturers to develop intelligent and smart office furniture. They are also integrating furniture with sensors to remind the users to change their posture or complete a certain task at regular intervals, which is further creating a positive outlook for the market. Other factors influencing the market growth include the availability of multi-functional furniture, and several technological advancements in the market.
