COVID-19 scenario-

Hotels, restaurants, and cafes play an important role in the distribution channel of the processed meat market. But, the global lockdown, especially during the initial phase of the pandemic, disrupted the entire supply chain, thereby impacted the processed meat market negatively. Dine-in facilities were limited for customers at the restaurant chains. The cafes were completely closed, while the hotels were closed owing to travel restrictions. These factors affected the market significantly. However, as the global situation is getting better, the market is anticipated to recoup soon.

On the basis of meat type, the poultry segment held the major share in 2020, garnering around two-fifths of the global processed meat market, due to the presence of higher protein content in the items. The pork segment, on the other hand, is expected to register the fastest CAGR of 5.1% throughout the forecast period. This is because processed pork meat has prolonged shelf life and offers high convenience to the consumers.

On the basis of product type, the frozen segment contributed to the lion's share in 2020, holding more than two-thirds of the global processed meat market. Growing need to increase the shelf life of frozen meat products propels the growth of the segment. However, the canned segment is projected to manifest the fastest CAGR of 5.9% from 2021 to 2030, due to increasing demand for convenience food products.

On the basis of the application, the commercial segment dominated the processed meat market in 2020, accounting for 85.0%. The commercial segment has grown significantly growth in the past few decades due to the increased popularity of fast-food chains, restaurants, and cafes such as KFC, McDonalds, Dominos, Burger King, and Yum Brands. Moreover, hotels, restaurants, and cafes at local level plays a significant role in processed meat consumption.
