FT LAUDERDALE, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, January 6, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Finding the most reliable and trusted health resources, education, and support can be a challenge, especially for busy women, so today, 16 women's health-focused organizations announced the launch of Know Where to Go, Know What to Do, a coalition of mission-driven organizations with a single shared mission: to educate and empower women to take responsibility for their well-being, understand their health, and increase awareness of their unique health needs. By joining together, this coalition provides education, support and tools to help women prioritize their health across all spectrums of wellness.

With today's digital age comes information overload, and too often women don't know where to turn for reliable health information causing many women to delay or ignore critical health matters. In fact, over 60% of women admit that they procrastinate on their health[1]. And, during the pandemic over 33% of women with major health issues such as heart disease or diabetes admit to delaying or canceling their doctor appointments or screenings[1].

"Women continue to put their own health in the backseat. It seems there's never enough time to take care of ourselves and all of those around us, but the time is now. Fortunately, there are amazing organizations doing all of the homework already – now we've come together to put it in one place so that making her health a priority is easier than ever. That's our heartfelt mission with this coalition.” – Delia Passi, CEO & Founder, Women’s Choice Award and women’s health advocate
