

NIKKEI ASIA AWARD: Shiok Meats Becomes the 1st Winner

TOKYO, JAPAN, January 11, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Nikkei Inc., Japan's largest media group and publisher, announced that a Singaporean food tech company, Shiok Meats (CEO Sandhya Sriram), has been named the winner of the inaugural "NIKKEI ASIA AWARD." Founded in 2018, Shiok Meats is involved in the development of lab-cultured seafood such as shrimp and crab. Nikkei will present a prize of 5 million yen and a trophy to Shiok Meats, and it will invite the founder to speak at the 27th International Conference on the "Future of Asia," which is scheduled to be held in May 2022.

Singapore cultured seafood startup wins Nikkei Asia Award

After careful consideration of diverse viewpoints from various parts of Asia, the NIKKEI ASIA AWARD winnowed down the choice of this year's awardee to a single torchbearer of innovation: Shiok Meats. Through its technologies and products specializing in cultivated foodstuffs that are beloved by Asians, Shiok Meats aims to solve problems of food scarcity and to reduce heavy tolls on the global environment. Nikkei believes that these goals have earned the company esteem and represent true innovation.

Shiok Meats was founded by two women who were studying stem cells and met as colleagues at Singapore's Agency for Science, Technology and Research (ASTAR). They immediately succeeded in developing lab-grown shrimp, crab and lobster and are now working towards commercial production of these foods.

About the NIKKEI ASIA AWARD

The NIKKEI ASIA AWARD is an award project established by Nikkei in May 2021 to promote the transformation of Asia and the world and to support the realization of a free and prosperous economic society. In 2021, Nikkei ended the "Nikkei Asia Prizes," which had been awarded every year since 1996, and it shifted to commend individuals or groups, selecting the leaders of "Innovation originating in Asia" from an "Asian perspective" based on diverse values. Selection is conducted once each year for fields such as business, research, technological development and social/artistic activities. An individual or a group responsible for a single activity is chosen as the winner annually. The prize is five million yen.

"Innovation from Asia" involves any novel and innovative activities that are started in Asia and led by people from and living*1 in Asia*2, creating a free and prosperous society by revitalizing the region and improving lives.

*1: Japanese individuals and groups consisting only of Japanese citizens will be excluded.

*2: For the NIKKEI ASIA AWARD, the following regions are referred to as "Asia":

- East Asia (Korean Peninsula, China, etc.)
- Southeast Asia (ASEAN member countries, etc.)
- Southwest Asia (Indian subcontinent countries)
- Independent nations in the Asia-Pacific region

About the Advisory Board

In order to reflect the diversity of perspectives in Asia, Nikkei has established the Advisory Board for the NIKKEI ASIA AWARD.
