Mehta said curcumin possesses antimicrobial, antifungal, and antiviral properties that may help your immune system to ward off infections.

NanoVeda's nutrition strips also fuse Swiss nanotechnology with a 1,000 years of traditional Indian ayurvedic system of medicine that emphasizes natural healing.

What makes NanoVeda different is its use of the patented ThinkSol Technology, an innovative technology, that converts ingredients into fine nanoparticles, which are rapidly dissolved and absorbed quickly in the body.

“All you have to do is peel, place the strip on your tongue, and let the body quickly absorb the nutrients,” he said.

While the nanotechnology enables the body to quickly absorb the ingredients, NanoVeda also uses Ultrasol CURCUMIN, which is 46 times more bioavailable than other brands.

“We know the body has a difficult time absorbing many types of curcumin, which is why we use Ultrasol CURCUMIN,” Mehta said.
