Mr. Dillon’s most recent work in cybersecurity includes specialization in aerospace and defense. Both will inform NetCentrics’ pursuit of business opportunities. The company, known for its cybersecurity services on behalf of government and military, is moving decisively into in new and emerging technologies.

"I look forward to joining the talented experts here at NetCentrics," says Mr. Dillon. "The highly specialized in-house knowledge is critical to success. I look forward to working together in service to the country's national security and in pursuit of company growth," adds Mr. Dillon.

Mr. Dillon joins NetCentrics after two years as Vice President of Business Development, Intelligence and Cyber Programs at Advanced Concepts and Technologies International ("ACT 1") in Arlington, Virginia. Prior to that he spent several years at CACI, a defense contractor in Arlington, Virginia.

NetCentrics continues to attract top talent. In recent months the company has brought on a number of high-profile leaders into its ranks, board of directors, and advisory board. Kenny Cushing, CEO, was recently awarded a "Best CEO" award by workplace sentiment site Comparably. He joined the company in October 2021.
