The Arabic word أصحاب is used to describe anyone who has come in contact with the Prophet of Islam; Muhammad (S.A.W). No matter how slight the contact provided the person believed with him, he is regarded as a companion. But like any other thing in life, there is rank and difference in the degree of companionship.

The first four Caliphs; regarded as أصحاب in Arabic are held in the highest esteem among the Muslims. And they are part of the ten companions that the noble Prophet was instructed by God to give glad tidings of going to the paradise.

Many things arouse our affections in us as humans. One's love for one's family and close friends is natural, but loving fellow humans isn't just enough to be a Muslim. If someone wants to be a Muslim, he/she must have the greatest love for the Messenger of God, the Holy Prophet Muhammad, his companions and for all other creatures in the universe.

There are several Hadiths and verses on the uniqueness of companions of the Prophet. They are well-praised by Allah and a good number of them were promised Paradise due to their sacrifices and forbearances to lots of difficult circumstances when Islam was still in its maiden stage.

These books are divided into three parts that focus on different phases in their lives. The first part is about early life of these leaders. These books discuss in detail the different events that took place in their lives when they accepted Islam. The persecution they faced after accepting Islam and how they remained steadfast on the religion of Islam. The second part of these books talks about the support and companionship of these rulers. The third and final part is about the Caliphate, when these rulers were appointed as Caliphs after the death of the Prophet (S.A.S), they played a significant role in uniting the Muslims.

Through these books series, readers will get to know about the well deed the rulers did and helped the people to settle peacefully.
