The demand for hospitality furniture will be steady as there will be a major drop in tourism due to restrictions in international travelling and the outbreak of COVID-19.”

Shankar Bhandalkar

Surge in usage of hospitality furniture at lounges in airport, railway station and other commercial buildings and demand for hospitality furniture due to high durability and stability by hotels, restaurants, and resorts drive the growth of the global hospitality furniture market.

In addition, the rise of tourism and craze of travelling worldwide has made the millennial go crazy about visiting new countries and exploring which has increased the demand of hotels and resorts hence increasing demand of hospitality furniture. However, the major constraints of the industry are the competition from local players who provide the furniture at lower price than the ongoing market scenario. Innovation in the industry is related to customized and themed furniture for different themes of hotels, airports, resorts and other commercial space.

With the rise in pollution and environmental issues the travelers are now more concerned about the eco-friendly nature of their hotel owners and other things they use. This has become a reason the commercial and hospitality owners are demanding green furniture that are made using sustainable forest woods and have low-toxic materials that do not harm the nature. The market leaders have come up with different green furniture such chairs by Herman Miller are made up of fewer raw materials than regular chairs but the chair supports all the features of a normal chair.

The global hospitality furniture demand has been changing from fine quality wood to use of other materials such as metals, textiles and other eye-catching materials. The hotel and resort owners are changing the preference as per customers demand of more attractive and photogenic furniture. This has made the manufacturers to design the furniture using a mixture of wood, textured textile and colorful metals.
