

Center Inlet Automotive Exhaust Mufflers Account for Over 23% Revenue Share of Global Automotive Exhaust Muffler market

global automotive exhaust muffler is set to reflect a minuscule CAGR of 2.7% over the forecast period (2017-2022)

UNITED STATES, January 19, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The functionality of an automotive exhaust muffler is limited to reducing noise from the engine, however, in some cases, it can influence the vehicle's fuel efficiency. The component's limited scope of application has undermined the prospects of its global market. Also, sales of automotive exhaust mufflers are taking a hit due to the rising cost of the component.

The unavoidable backpressure remains one of the most severe drawbacks of exhaust mufflers and continues to be a major engineering challenge for manufacturers. While exhaust mufflers sufficiently allow the release of gases produced by a vehicle, it compromises the engine's firing frequency.

Factors as such are expected to deter the global demand for exhaust mufflers in the medium term. According to the latest report published by Fact.MR, the global automotive exhaust muffler is set to reflect a minuscule CAGR of 2.7% over the forecast period (2017-2022).
