The pleasant atmosphere was enhanced by a musical performance, which has become a tradition at the beginning of the services, this time in the form of a fantastic jazz concert.

In addition to receiving useful and life-enhancing information, the participants had a great time and are looking forward to the next sessions.

The special atmosphere of the services is not only for the faithful, as the Sunday service is open to all, regardless of religion or affiliation. Many curious onlookers have been to these events before to gain insight into the teachings of Scientology, its creed and the life of the community.

The Church of Scientology welcomes the public to its next service on Valentine's Day, 13 February. In keeping with World Day of Love, the theme will be relationships and marriage. Participants will learn what makes a relationship work, how to make both partners happy, and even hear interesting and useful information about repairing broken marriages.

Additionally, Scientologists around the world promote a course called "CREATING A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE" which contains Scientology breakthroughs that show you exactly what makes a successful marriage.
