

Legislate participates in LexisNexis panel on the future of legal tech

What are the challenges for legal tech, what does the future of legal tech look like and why is bias something to consider when thinking about AI and justice?

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, January 20, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Legislate participates in the LexisNexis panel on the future of legal tech, organised by the International Law Book Facility. The panel was chaired by Ellen Lake, Senior Associate at Clifford Chance, member of Clifford Chance's Tech Group and member of the ILBF's Operating Committee. The other panelists were Chris O'Connor, Director of Solutions at LexisNexis UK and Frankie Garcia, Product Manager at Mind Foundry.

□

The panelists answered questions around the challenges for developing legal tech, what the future of legal tech looks like and why is bias something to consider when thinking about AI and justice?

□

Legislate founder and CEO, Charles Brecque, shared his views on how legal tech will evolve, stating that we will begin to see a democratisation of legal tech products and discussed how standardising templates will fit into the current legal framework. Charles discussed how the development of legal tech products aimed at the general public would pose little threat to traditional lawyer-driven practices but dramatically improve the quality of standard agreements.

Charles Brecque

Legislate

email us here

Visit us on social media:

Facebook

Twitter

LinkedIn

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/561085180>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2024 Newsmatics Inc. All Right Reserved.