The commonly observed types of awnings are fixed, and retractable. Among these, the retractable segment accounts for the largest market size by value, owing to increased demand from residential spaces. The market is analyzed with respect to different products provided, such as patio, window freestanding, and others. The market is mainly driven by development in residential, and commercial construction sectors. However, fluctuation in raw material prices limit the growth of the Europe awning market.

However, owing to the coronavirus situation, various manufacturers in the Europe awnings market had to stop their business production due to lockdown implemented in countries such as Germany, the UK, Italy, and others. This break directly impacted the sales of Europe awnings companies. In addition, lack of manpower and raw materials halts the supply of awnings. However, reopening of production facilities and introduction of vaccines for coronavirus disease are anticipated to lead to re-opening of awnings companies.
