Canadian spa and wellness consumers stayed close to home in 2021, seeking out 'socially distanced' fresh-air travel experiences.

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA, January 25, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ --

Travelers in Canada were drawn to the outdoors last year, as country, ocean, and mountain spa and wellness experiences proved the most popular.

Spas of America's annual ranking of consumer preferences found people sought out outdoor fresh air, outside of most cities, but close to home.

With over 500 acres of rolling hills and lush cedar forest, Ste. Anne's Spa has been an ideal respite for people seeking to getaway.”

Jim Corcoran

“With over 500 acres of rolling hills and lush cedar forest, Ste. Anne's Spa has been an ideal respite for people seeking to getaway. Years ago, we adopted a mission to 'Bring the power of healing through human touch to the world,'" says Ste. Anne's owner and general manager Jim Corcoran. "It seems as though this resonates today more than ever and in these challenging times.”

“For the Canadian spa and wellness industry, 2021 was a challenging but good year, with many hotel and resort spas reporting strong revenue, despite staffing challenges,” says Spas of America president Craig Oliver. "Consumers were affected by a partially opened economy and changing national and provincial travel guidelines, which created uncertainty. In turn, consumers responded by supporting regional and local spa and wellness businesses, especially drive-to destinations. Moving forward, we expect a strong year for the industry in Canada, as pent-up demand will bring out consumers seeking exciting spa and wellness experiences with a focus on fitness, health, and improved quality of life."
