Persons who would like to read the post can visit at

<https://www.workingsolutionsnyc.com/legislation-aimed/>. The post overviews legislation in Congress on sexual harassment issues. The main issue is so-called "mandatory arbitration clauses." Perhaps more importantly, the post explains that workers do have rights and anyone who believes that they may have been subject to sexual harassment should reach out for an attorney consultation. They can read the information page on the issue at <https://www.workingsolutionsnyc.com/for-employees/sexual-harassment/>. In some circumstances, an employer may seek to force an employee to sign a "severance agreement" in order to avoid a potential lawsuit. Those who are facing a severance agreement should reach out to an attorney before they sign; they can learn more at the updated content on severance agreement issues at <https://www.workingsolutionsnyc.com/for-employees/new-york-city-severance-agreements/>.

FINDING AN EMPLOYMENT LAWYER IN NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY

Here is background on this release. First and foremost, nowadays many employees remain subject, unfortunately, to sexual harassment at work. Managers and others with power may use that power in inappropriate ways. Workers do have rights, however, and whether or not new laws are passed, anyone who believes that they are subject to sexual harassment should reach out for a consultation. Only a trained attorney can evaluate the facts and the law and then advise as to the best course of action. Nothing read on the website, in particular, or the Internet, in general, should be construed as legal advice. Those in New York and New Jersey are fortunate to have many choices, and they can reach out to the firm for a consultation on their particular situation. No two situations are alike.
