HOW BAUD THERAPY WORKS

Brain imaging research is confirming the BAUD's mechanism of action as stimulating plasticity by disrupting reconsolidation of problem circuits, primarily in the limbic system and the amygdala. This acoustical stimulation helps the brain shift neural function back to a normal level, based on its innate ability to self-regulate. The BAUD process enhances the brain's natural neuroplasticity in a rapid and highly targeted way, which produces a safe and effective result. Clients typically see dramatic reduction in problem symptoms after the first 20-minute session. Read article describing how BAUD works.

The BAUD has shown effective symptom reduction on three main types of problems:

- Emotional issues, from severe phobias and PTSD to everyday anxieties. See video
- Cravings or urges: food cravings, substance abuse, unwanted urges of all types. See video
- Chronic pain of all types. Read article

The BAUD protocol is simple and gentle. A neural shift typically occurs within the session, and the client typically feels significant relief immediately after. Brain function is measurably improved, and has been confirmed by EEG and fMRI imaging. Best of all, positive results are typically long-lasting to permanent.

One woman recently came in to Tucson Biofeedback with severe PTSD after being hit by a car on her bike. The panic, anxiety and PTSD flashbacks everytime she saw a crosswalk or drive in a car was completely resolved in 1 session alone. While the memory of the incident was still there, the charge and trauma pattern in the Brain and Nervous System was deleted.

BAUD Biofeedback Therapy Facilitates Major Change in 1-3 sessions

Researchers once believed that the connections between the brain's neurons only developed in the first few years of childhood, and then became fixed and very hard to change. An enormous amount of research over the last 20 years, however, confirms that the brain retains its ability to "re-wire" itself throughout life. They call this Neural Plasticity. Simply put, the brain is not as "hard-wired" as once thought, but can change as we reshape actions and behaviors. This understanding has made it possible for doctors and clinics to use neurofeedback and BAUD to help treat serious disorders like:

- Depression
- Anxiety
- Concussions and TBI's

"I was reluctant to believe the BAUD worked, suspecting my problem with trichotillomania would recur as it had so many times over decades. But over subsequent days, I noticed a difference in my behavior and reduced anxiety. My hair is full again. For the first time since my youth, I can wear a longer hair style instead of cutting-in layers to mask the issue. Thank you for this revolutionary product!!"
