Owner/CEO, Dr. Olympia Gillini recalls, "The idea to establish an organization that would truly celebrate and unite the film world began I was 17 and a participant at the Berlin Film Festival. From there, I took part in and attended a multitude of international film festivals, film markets, and entertainment industry events." The dedication and passion demonstrated over the years distinguished him from the international film community.

This November, millions of viewers from the United States to China will tune in to enjoy the 25th celebration of the Family Film Awards. Films with family values have been awarded from networks and productions including ABC, BBC, Films, Disney, Columbia, Tencent, Pixar, FOX, and Hallmark. View the entire catalog at "The Family Film Award seeks to honor excellence in family-oriented film making. These awards are presented to "G" and "PG" rated feature movies and tv shows," states FFA.

Emmy Award-Winning producer and director, David McKenzie, along with Associated Television will be producing this year's Family Film Awards.

"Entertainment industry professionals will be added to the Family Film Awards board in coming months and has expanded international awards entries to include more films from countries beyond the U.S. and China," states Dr. Jeannie Yi, co-executive producer of Family Film Awards.

The 25th Family Film Awards will take place in late November and will also be featured with its own float in the 2022 Hollywood Christmas Parade. The reason they are having a float in the Hollywood Christmas parade is that the Family Film Awards will also help support and promote Toys for Tots and their activities in helping children and their families.
