A sneak peek into National's revamped company websites

Representing global business offerings and the latest business ventures of the company, the launch of their three uniquely positioned websites echo a sequence of old and new design philosophies.

GoNational.com is the corporate landing page portraying the two major divisions of the company, inviting users to navigate the company's world of cargo and airline operations. The page reemphasizes National's long-term vision while also displaying the core business principles.

NationalAirCargo.com is the fully upgraded logistics solutions portal of the cargo division. Using the originally crafted parallelogram logo symbolizing "a flying box" to depict the multi-faceted capabilities, the message to customers is kept absolute and simple. Alongside the demonstration of a host of solutions the company offers, the industries tab gives customers a glimpse of a wide range of sectors the company partners with. An improved and revitalized version of the live shipment tracking is also featured on the site giving customers real-time visibility of their cargo.

NationalAirlines.com is the dedicated domain for the airline division. Displaying National Airlines' distinctive fleet of aircraft, the homepage showcases the three aircraft types they own. With the carefully articulated airline services alongside, customers are able to directly match their specific charter cargo and passenger requirements with these offerings.

The Media Room invites users to know more about National's latest news, press releases, videos and social media updates.
