Terbine makes it possible for the data being generated by virtually every type of device and machine to be shared between systems and organizations, via a sophisticated platform that curates and monetizes data transactions. “Terbine has the potential to touch nearly every industry, in particular automotive, energy and infrastructure,” said David Knight, Terbine CEO. “Tory is well known as someone who approaches complex engineering issues with strong research and integrity, qualities that will aid our forays into many different sectors.”

“I'm very excited to help Terbine along its journey to literally take the pulse of the Earth, which is the company's slogan," said Tory Belleci. "Together and through my new YouTube channel The Truth About Tech we'll dig into the important technologies that are shaping the future, many of them being core to Terbine's achieving its goals."

About Tory Belleci

Tory Belleci is best known as the daredevil host of Discovery Channel's hit series MythBusters. A graduate of SFSU film school, Tory began his career in the industry behind the scenes as a model maker at George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic. He has built models for major Hollywood movies, including the Star Wars prequels, Starship Troopers, The Matrix 2 & 3 and others. Currently, Tory is the Executive Producer and host of the Amazon original series The Great Escapists, Science Channel's The Explosion Show, Motor Trend's recently released Motor MythBusters, and the YouTube series The Truth About Tech.

About Terbine

Terbine is the first global-scale system for the seamless exchanging of IoT data, which characterizes, categorizes, licenses, regulates, tracks, monetizes and securitizes the flow of machine-generated data emanating from public agencies, academic institutions and commercial entities. Designed to leverage continuing advances in artificial intelligence, 5G and edge computing, Terbine will scale with the growth in IoT data generation and solidify its usage within and between industries, to the benefit of global commerce and society at large.
