The increasing adoption of smart grid technology represents the primary factor bolstering the Europe smart security grid market. Smart grid security facilitates a stable and reliable power system operation during contingency situations in case of any critical power system component failure. Furthermore, the European Union (EU) has also set a target for reducing greenhouse gases by 20% to meet its energy needs while using renewable energy sources. This has also escalated the demand for innovative grid security solutions across the region. Moreover, several technological advancements, such as the integration of the internet of things (IoT) and connected devices with smart grid security systems, ensure data privacy and protection. On account of these factors, the market is expected to witness positive growth in the near future. Looking forward, the market is expected to continue its robust growth during the forecast period

(2021-2026).
