The escalating demand for automation in metal fabrication processes is among the key factors driving the abrasives market. Additionally, the extensive product adoption in the manufacturing of numerous automotive parts, such as mirrors, air ducts, fuel tanks, etc., is further catalyzing the market growth. In line with this, the increasing utilization of abrasives for minimizing carbon dioxide emissions and lowering noise levels in automobiles is acting as another significant growth-inducing factor. Moreover, the expanding construction activities are propelling the need for super-abrasives, including industrial diamonds that are used in the cutting of hard metals. This, in turn, is also augmenting the global market. Apart from this, the rising investments in R&D activities aimed at developing the next generation of non-woven, polyester, and fabric-based product variants that offer enhanced versatility, minimal smearing issues, faster cut-rate, etc., are anticipated to fuel the abrasives market over the forecasted period.
