Crowdfund Insider, a leading news and information website covering the emerging global industry of disruptive finance including investment crowdfunding, blockchain, and other forms of Fintech, has launched 'Investment & Crowdfunding Webinar Series 2022' a webinar series exploring and evaluating the ongoing crowdfunding revolution going on in the US and around the world.

This webinar series will be an excellent opportunity for investors, issuers and industry professionals to learn more about the crowdfunding revolution currently in progress”

Rialto Markets CEO & Co-Founder Shari Noonan

The JOBS Act kickstarted the democratization of private securities through investment crowdfunding for many early-stage, high-growth private companies, as well as more established private companies that have ambitious goals to expand at scale in the future.

The emergence of Regulation CF (Reg CF), where you can raise up to $5m a year, and Regulation A+ capital offerings, which allow private companies to raise up to $75m a year, have accelerated the growth of crowdfunding – according to investment monitoring platform Pitchbook, the global crowdfunding market grew by 1121% last year, from $8.61bn to $113.52bn.

On top of this, Forbes reported that the private securities market in 2021 would reach a record $7 trillion, and forecasts it to grow to $30 trillion by 2030, in a market that in the US alone contains 27 million private companies.

Investing in private securities and in particular, equity crowdfunding and secondary trading could potentially be the largest investment and trading opportunity transformation of the next few years and beyond.

Some private companies progress from a Regulation CF (crowdfunding) raise to an institutional offering while others prefer to be able to raise $75m a year using Regulation A+. Reg D (506c) is available for accredited investors and is frequently paired with a CF offering. Some crowdfunded firms have become successful publicly traded firms.

Andrew Dix, CEO and founder of the Crowded Media Group and publisher of Crowdfund Insider said:

"We are incredibly excited to get started on this series with our event organisers and investment data specialists, World Digital Foundation. The private securities market is starting to transform and crowdfunding, along with secondary trading of private securities will accelerate that, but as with any emerging market, the importance of strong regulation can help to give more security and trust to the ecosystem."

The investment and crowdfunding series is already gaining widespread attention, with a stellar programme and some of the leading figures and companies joining our webinar panel discussions each and every month, to broaden the discussion while continuing to educate and inform these financial markets.

Shari Noonan, CEO and co-founder of broker-dealer Rialto Markets, who specialise in private securities, crowdfunding and regulated ATS secondary trading said:

"Dalmore has successfully onboarded nearly 200 Reg A+ issuers, and we pride ourselves on leading the way for primary issuance and secondary market trading of private securities, so we are delighted to support this timely investment and crowdfunding webinar series."

Nirvana Patel, Chief Compliance Officer of Prime Trust said:

"As an infrastructure provider, we help companies raise capital by bringing together diverse participants in the crowdfunding industry. We are excited to be part of a forum that brings those same participants together to share knowledge and drive the industry forward."
