Body temperature monitoring assists healthcare professionals in accessing acute illness, antigenic responses, infection, and inflammation among patients. It is performed by placing thermometers on different body areas, such as the rectum, oral cavity, armpit, ear, and forehead. As it is easy to use, convenient, accurate, and safe, its demand is escalating across the globe.

Market Trends

The increasing prevalence of chronic disorders and viral infections among the masses, along with the rising geriatric population, which is more susceptible to developing such ailments, represents one of the key factors bolstering the growth of the market. In addition, key players are introducing wearable devices for continuous monitoring of body temperature. Apart from this, due to the outbreak of coronavirus disease (COVID-19), there is a rise in the need for non-contact temperature assessment devices in commercial complexes, such as shopping malls, schools, restaurants, theatres, and stores, for minimizing the risk of transmitting the infection.

Note: We are regularly tracking the direct effect of COVID-19 on the market, along with the indirect influence of associated industries. These observations will be integrated into the report.
