As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the purchase behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Market Trends:

The global organic makeup remover market is primarily propelled by the growing awareness about the harmful effects of chemical-based beauty products. This has escalated the demand for organic makeup removers, particularly among the younger population. Furthermore, significant growth in the beauty and personal care industry has bolstered the use of green cosmetics, such as organic makeup removers. Besides this, the expansion of the e-commerce sector offering online shopping for consumers and the rising influence of social media are also contributing to the market growth. In addition to this, several key players are utilizing social media marketing strategies and partnerships with influencers and celebrities to expand their existing consumer base. Moreover, numerous innovative practices, such as organic certifications and ingredient labeling, are being adopted by manufacturers for creating transparency, which will continue to augment the global market for organic makeup remover in the coming years.
