

Children's Book Introduces Young Readers to "The Dog Who Had A Party"

I-J Letters' tale shows wonders of friendship through animal friends' story

SCOTLAND, March 22, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The adventures of Dog continues with I-J Letters' new children's picture book that shows the wonders of having a birthday party with friends. "The Dog Who Had A Party" is a vibrantly illustrated tale that shows how the animal friends have a great time, as well as the preparations they had to organize the events.

In the pages of "The Dog Who Had A Party," kids will see not only how fun birthdays can be, but also the preparations for the occasion, like delivering invitations, and how rewarding they can be to participants and party organizers. They will join Dog and his friends: Beagle, Cat, Hedgehog and Pigeon. Their adventures convey values such as friendship, trust, love, happiness and kindness. And they show that while friends may have some differences - some may be furry dogs, others may be spikey hedgehogs or pigeons that can fly - they are all the same and share an unbreakable bond.

This is the second book in Letters' series, the tales of the titular Dog which deliver important messages to young readers. These stories are suitable for children aged three to six years. Additionally, they also convey invaluable life lessons and experiences to kids who may not be able to go out or gather as much due to the pandemic and the resulting lockdowns. This is not a minor issue, as studies have shown that lockdowns have resulted in increased loneliness among children and young people who lack physical contact with friends, families and peers. In fact, the lockdowns was what inspired the author to start writing books.
