Reports And Data

The global Automotive Center Console market is forecasted to reach USD 50.15 Billion by 2027, according to a new report by Reports and Data. The industry is witnessing high growth in the global market due to an increased demand for the automotive interior to ensure a high level of comfort and customization. Also, an increase in the luxury vehicle market is helping the market grow highly as high technology vehicles are the highest contributor to the market.

An increase in sales cars in many regions, especially in developing nations, advancement in technology pertaining to vehicle safety, will also fuel the market growth. Moreover, the availability of service flexibility, cost-effectiveness, and reliable maintenance services is also expected to propel the market growth globally. The high price of raw materials is expected to affect market growth. However, increasing demand from the consumers for a luxurious and comfortable traveling experience will propel the demand for the product.

The COVID-19 impact:

The distribution of Covid-19's has influenced manufacturing activities worldwide. Logistic constraints and reconsiderations of the specifications for raw materials are becoming a problem for producers all over the world. Lockdown measures to minimize the spread of the pandemic in many countries have had a major effect on the automotive industries, including the shut-down of several automobile manufacturing units. Over the weeks, the market has experienced a downturn that can continue in the coming months. The Asia Pacific region was the most affected by this pandemic, with China at the center of the outbreak. Most initiatives in multiple countries have changed to a temporary halt. Production and supply were put on hold, which caused losses for manufacturers, dealers, and consumers.

Key participants include Hyundai Mobis Co Ltd., Faurecia S.A., Johnson Controls Inc., Alps Electric Co. Ltd., Methode Electronics, Delphi Automotive plc., Magna International Inc., Valeo Group, Continental AG, and Calsonic Kansei Corp., among others.
