underlying vehicle dynamic model. Driving simulators are used for entertainment as well as in training of driver's education courses taught in educational institutions and private businesses. They are also used for research purposes in the area of human factors and medical research, to monitor driver behavior, performance, and attention and in the car industry to design and evaluate new vehicles or new advanced driver assistance systems. Driver-in-the-Loop (DIL) has become an industry standard name for automotive Human-and-Hardware-in-the-Loop (H2IL) simulation. Driver-in-the-Loop is a fitting name.
