

GlobalAir.com annual aviation scholarship opens for applications for 2022-23

The GlobalAir.com Calvin L. Carrithers Aviation Scholarship will provide four students $1,000 each towards their aviation training.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, UNITED STATES, February 28, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The GlobalAir.com Calvin L. Carrithers Aviation Scholarship, which will provide four students $1,000 each towards their aviation training, is now open for applications.

After its initial launch in 2014, a total of 30 aviation students have been awarded the scholarship, many of whom are now making a positive impact in the aviation community.

The Calvin L. Carrithers Aviation Scholarship is awarded to four students enrolled in an accredited collegiate aviation program in the United States during the 2022 - 2023 school year.

Applications must include a short essay and applicants have the option to include a letter of recommendation. This essay should detail the applicant's interest in aviation, future career path, and how they intend to complete their aviation program.

“

We are excited to be able to offer the next generation of aviation professionals the necessary means to further their educations.”

Jeffrey Carrithers

Scholarship recipients will be required to maintain a weekly blog in which they highlight their experiences with flight training, course work, and their continued participation in the aviation community.

Recipients will also have the opportunity to contribute articles to the GlobalAir.com aviation news section. Articles written by the students for the will work closely with the company's editorial team to hone their writing skills, learn reporting techniques, and enhance their personal brand through the company's social media platforms.

In 2021, students from St. Louis University (Grace Kane), Liberty University (Markus Jantzson), Florida Institute of Technology (Selise Askeland), and the University of North Dakota (Caroline Kelly) were selected by the GlobalAir.com scholarship committee to receive the scholarship.

These four students have contributed regularly to GlobalAir.com, writing articles that have reached thousands across the aviation industry and propelled their writing capabilities to the next level.

"We are proud to offer this scholarship program again this year as a way to support future leaders in the aviation industry," said Jeffrey Carrithers, President and CEO of GlobalAir.com. "We are excited to be able to offer the next generation of aviation professionals the necessary means to further their educations."

The scholarship committee is encouraging qualified and passionate aviation students to apply before the deadline of Aug. 15, 2022. Scholarship winners will be notified no later than Sept. 1 of their selection and acceptance into the program.

The application can be accessed at www.globalair.com/scholarships/

Colleges or students that would like more information about the program can contact former Calvin L. Carrithers Aviation Scholarship recipient and current curator Addi Hemphill (addi.hemphill@globalair.com).
