

Akopyan Law Firm, A.P.C. Offers Legal Help to Disabled Employees Denied Reasonable Accommodation in LA

One of California's top employment law firms offers legal representation to disabled employees in the Los Angeles area.

BURBANK, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, March 2, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Representatives of the Akopyan Law Firm, A.P.C. announced today that the Akopyan Law Firm, A.P.C. provides representation to disabled employees who have been denied reasonable accommodation by their employers in the Los Angeles area.

"Federal and State laws protect qualified employees who have disabilities and prohibit employers from discriminating against or treating their employees differently due to their disabilities," said Michael Akopyan, founder and spokesperson for the Akopyan Law Firm A.P.C.

"When an employee has a "qualified disability," the Americans with Disabilities Act and Fair Employment and Housing Act require the employer to provide a reasonable accommodation," added Akopyan and explained, "This means that the employer has to make reasonable accommodation for the known disabilities employees to enable them to perform a position's essential functions unless doing so would produce undue hardship to the employer's operations."

In California, disabled employees have even greater protections because of the Fair Employment and Housing Act, which applies to smaller employers and applies even to certain temporary physical or mental conditions.

"If you feel your employer didn't provide you reasonable accommodation, contact the Akopyan Law Firm today. We offer complimentary case evaluations to folks who feel that they have been wronged by their employers," said Akopyan.
