Beyond the more general pages as listed above, the new site has key pages focused on very specific technological areas. For example, the page on CNC Router Cutting (<https://www.platinumsigns.com.au/cnc-router-cutting/>) explains that the company has large scale fabrication capacity for signs. Thus, it can create bespoke and cost-effective signage. In addition to working for signage clients and on CNC router projects, the sign specialists also offer trade cutting for various industries. Companies that are industrial fabricators, artists, wood makers, furniture shop owners, or any type of architectural project can leverage this advanced technology. A computer numerical control (CNC) router is a computer-controlled cutting machine which typically mounts a hand-held router as a spindle which is used for cutting various materials, such as wood, composites, aluminium, steel, plastics, glass, and foams.
