Reminiscing My Tragic World War II Experiences and an Autobiography

TUCSON, ARIZONA, UNITED STATES, March 5, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Henry Walosik has published his autobiography titled My DP Story. Based on the true to life story of the author. When the German Army rolled into Poland in 1939, they had no mercy and rounded up people all over Poland and had them sent to Germany to work on farms to produce food for Hitler's army. The next story is one that describes the lives of two Poles whose destiny it was to meet under these circumstances and subsequently marry and have children. They just came out of a war during which they experienced hard forced labor and hunger. Fortunately, they came out alive, whereas millions lost their lives. They, now, intended to put the pieces together and get on with their lives. The story is related by the youngest of three children and describes the family's life as best as he could remember.

“I have come a long way from childhood to my present sixty-three years. My life commenced in Germany, after World War II, where I was born and raised until the age of two and a half.”

Henry Walosik

Henry Walosik was born in a refugee camp situated in Sindelfingen, Germany on November 20, 1948. His parents were prisoners of war and relocated to this camp as soon as the war was over. When he was one and a half years old, he left Germany with his mother and siblings and emigrated to Val-d'Or, Quebec, Canada, where his father established a home. He was educated in the English language but also possessed knowledge of the French language. He married a Quebecoise at the
