The company is incredibly proud to be recognized in the sixth annual list of FT 1000: Europe's fastest-growing companies. It's a reflection of the increasing relevance of their mission to create positive digital experiences and communities. It is also a testament to the hard work and incredible skill of their brilliant teams all over the world.

The Financial Times and Statista, in their analysis of the rankings, noted that companies that made the cut this year were sufficiently resilient to survive and thrive with the collapse in demand due to last year's impact of the coronavirus. Technology leads the sectorial mix with a fifth of the companies on the list, followed by construction and retail. Italy is the country with the most entries on the list, followed by Germany and the United Kingdom.

This is Amity's first entry into the FT 1000 list and it comes after experiencing tremendous growth in the US and Europe, culminating in the opening of a new European HQ in Milan, Italy, earlier this year.

Francesca Gargaglia, Co-founder and COO of Amity, reflects on this great achievement.

"Being ranked as one of Europe's fastest-growing companies is something that we are incredibly proud of. This result is nothing more than the incredible hard work and dedication from all the employees across different departments, everyone at Amity has been involved in making this achievement a reality."

Looking towards the future, Amity's plans are no less ambitious. They are just at the beginning of their journey, with many industries that have not yet had their social moment. As more and more product categories realize the power of social, Amity is aiming at even more rapid growth in the coming years.

"Our priority has always been to provide businesses with the tools to build the best digital experiences possible. We strongly believe in the power of social and moving forward, even more companies across industries will leverage social features on their own platforms to provide better experiences for their users."

Says Korawad Chearavanont, Founder and CEO of Amity.
