Dota 2 is one of the most popular eSport games nowadays with more than 7 million active players (according to statista) across the globe. Dota 2 holds the title of the biggest prizepool game title - last year The International prizepool was more than 40 million us dollars. The game is extremely competitive and almost all dota 2 players are part of competitive matchmaking and everyone wants to be on top of the regional ranked leaderboard.

Every dota 2 account can have access to a matchmaking after playing 100 hours in normal matches and completing the first 10 calibration games. Once calibration is complete a player will have MMR - a rating in dota 2 which determines skill bracket. A player will also have a medal which is a visual representation of MMR. Each win will result in +20/30 MMR and each loss will remove 20/30 MMR as well. There is a ceiling each player can reach and can't go higher without some help or coaching. This is when services like z3ddota.com can help.

About Dota 2 boosting services

Boosting or carry services in dota 2 are designed to help players reach their goals. There are coaches in any traditional sport. It happens that a lower skilled football team plays against a much stronger team. However, it is hard to archive in video games because matchmaking is controlled by algorithms and dota 2 matchmaking system tries to keep winrate around 50% - it means you have fair games and play against same skill players. However, if a player wants to progress then a player needs to play against lower skilled players as well as higher skilled players to learn something. That's a problem in almost all competitive video games and dota 2 boosting is designed to help players to play on different skill brackets.
