It was a lot of fun getting to know Jeff. He is down to earth and shares my love for apple pies from the Cashiers Farmers Market, which is all it takes to be good in my book.”

Adam Haigh

Reflecting on his long career, Jeff Foxworthy weaved stories about his beekeeping (an accidental hobby initiated by his daughter), that elusive barbeque joint somewhere in North Carolina that he only knows by its unmatched and heavenly smell it emits across the highway, and just how he manages to keep up the stamina to wear so many professional hats. The categories for the episode were Yep, That's About Right, Something's Cooking and That's Exhausting. Co-host Adam Haigh proclaimed, “It was a lot of fun getting to know Jeff. He is down to earth and shares my love for apple pies from the Cashiers Farmers Market, which is all it takes to be good in my book.” Jamie Hernan continued, “It’s always nice to speak to legends who are as genuine and friendly as your next-door neighbors, well at least my next door neighbors who are pretty cool.”

Jeff Foxworthy is known around the world and highly respected for his down-home humor and intriguing storytelling. He holds the distinction of being the largest selling comedy recording artist in history, a multiple Grammy Award nominee, bestselling author of twenty-six books, game show host, sitcom star and, as he discusses on the Comedy Roundtable, a part time beekeeper. Jeff’s sense of humor and style of comedy has been compared to that of Mark Twain.
