Its in their nature to be protectors and in this case they simply cannot protect these kids. Yet, they still feel a sense of urgency to do something to help. So they decided to donate money made from each moving job to the Save the Ukrainian children's charity. They carefully Vetted them and found them to be a upstanding and trustworthy charity.

What is the current situation in Ukraine?

Today, war is forcing children and families across Ukraine into basements and bomb shelters to escape explosions.

In Eastern Ukraine, more than 400,000 children live in the areas at high risk of the direct impacts of the presence of soldiers and artillery, including being injured or killed by guns, landmines and explosive weapons, or being displaced from their homes.

Temperatures in the capital of Kyiv are dropping below freezing, and displaced children may face long nights and days exposed to brutal conditions. Many families forced to flee will require help with their shelter, food, and clean water needs.

Children on the move across Eastern Europe are at risk of hunger, illness, trafficking and abuse. Distressed children and mothers have been forced to leave fathers and husbands behind after authorities ordered Ukrainian men aged 18-60 to stay and fight.

Its in our nature to be protectors and in this case we simply cannot protect these kids. We feel a sense of urgency to do something so we decided to donate money to the Save the children's charity. We carefully Vetted them and found them to be a upstanding charity that we can trust.
