

Womens Health Diagnostics Market 2030 LAMEA offers a huge customer base to the manufacturers of the market

Asia-Pacific is expected to grow at the highest CAGR of 8.1% from 2017 to 2023

PORTLAND, OREGON, UNITED STATE, March 10, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The estimates of Census 2011 in South Africa reveal that around 2.5 million females in South Africa belonged to the age group of 60 years and above in 2011. Hence, these people are prone to encounter various chronic and lifestyle disorders. According to a new report published by Allied Market Research, titled, Women's Health Diagnostics

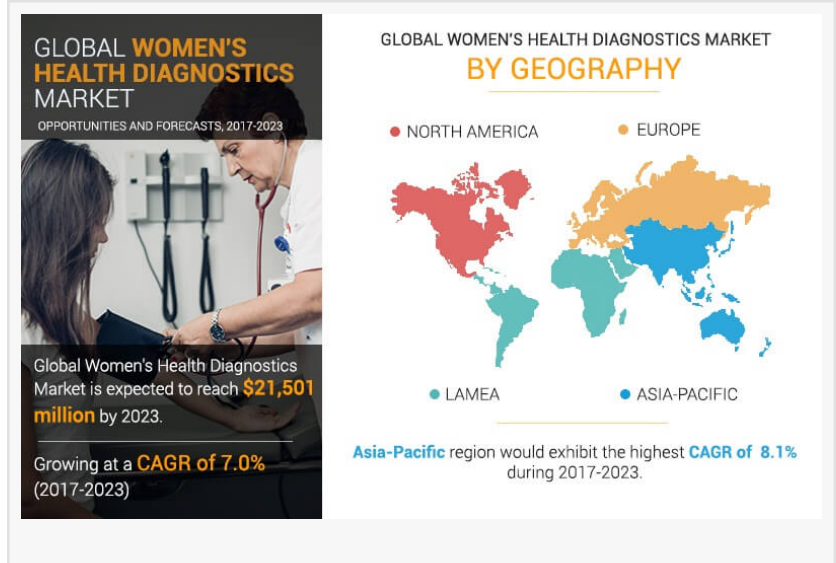

Market, by Type and End User: Global Opportunity Analysis and Industry Forecast, 2017-2023," the global women's health diagnostics market was valued at $13,133 million in 2016, and is projected to reach $21,501 million in 2023 at a CAGR of 7.0% from 2017 to 2023.

Factors such as rise in prevalence of various chronic lifestyle disorders in women, rise in female geriatric population who are more prone to several disorders, increase in adoption of point of care diagnosis, high demand for imaging and diagnosing centers, and support from government in promoting awareness about women related disorders. However, factors such as expensive imaging procedures and lack of skilled professionals restrains the market growth. Conversely, huge untapped market potential in the emerging countries, such as South Africa and India, and development of novel and advanced imaging procedures such as miniature devices are expected to provide lucrative opportunities to the market players.

Key findings of the Women's Health Diagnostics Market:

Diagnostic tests segment accounted for around 55.1% share of the global women's health diagnostics market in 2016

Diagnostic devices segment is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.5% from 2017 to 2023.

Hospitals and clinics segment accounted for around 49.8% share of the global women's health diagnostics market in 2016

North America accounted for around 33.7% share of the global women's health diagnostics market in 2016
