Key Market Drivers:

Growing awareness regarding the health benefits of beta-glucan is expected to propel growth of the beta-glucan market over the forecast period. Immune health benefits of mushrooms have been touted for centuries. For instance, in June 2021, Life Extension announced the launch of mushroom immune with beta glucans. These active components are known to have immuno-modulating properties, providing a comprehensive effect on various immune cells.

Moreover, growing demand for nutraceutical products is expected to augment the growth of the beta-glucan market. For instance, in July 2021, Solabia-Algatech Nutrition announced the launch of an algae-sourced beta-glucan ingredient for immune support called BioGlena. The ingredient also contains protein and essential minerals, vitamins, and fatty acids.

COVID-19 Impact Analysis:

A pilot study in India has reported that the intake of two strains of beta-glucan can lower cytokine storm and coagulopathy biomarkers in people with COVID-19. Moreover, an Indian Council for Medical Research-approved clinical study on the efficacy of a component in black yeast in reducing the adverse effects of COVID-19 and aiding faster recovery of COVID-19 patients has shown promising results. This in turn is expected to drive the market growth.
