

InjureFree and fusesport, Inc. Partner to Improve Athlete Health and Safety

SOLANA BEACH, CA, UNITED STATES, March 10, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- fusesport, Inc. and InjureFree have announced the formation of an athlete health partnership, designed to positively impact wellness in youth organized sports nationwide. The adaptation to fusesport's industry-leading sports management platform allows fusesport's users access to a full array of InjureFree's technology services, integrated directly into the fusesport platform. InjureFree offers complete digital management of an individual athlete's and organizations' health information as it pertains to sports, and eases administrative pain points for sport organizers. Feature access includes the ability to digitally manage pre-season medical paperwork for entire rosters, and real-time injury incident documentation to the cloud.

The partnership between two industry leaders in the youth sport and health space signifies a dedication to focus on 'safety first' by providing fusesport's users easily-accessible tools to improve player welfare. InjureFree's SaaS+ model provides the support channels necessary when improving risk management practices, taking the burden off of administrators, coaches, and volunteers.

Partnering with InjureFree for these critical services gives our customers easy-to-use, integrated compliance and insurance services that are price-competitive.”

Jeff Bliss, CEO of fusesport

Jeff Bliss, CEO of fusesport, says “partnering with InjureFree for these critical services gives our customers easy-to-use, integrated compliance and insurance services that are price-competitive. InjureFree further enhances the industry-leading membership and event services that fusesport already offers to customers such as US Olympic & Paralympic Committee, Special Olympics, USA Youth & HS Rugby, National Senior Games and World Police & Fire Games.”

Large NGBs, state level associations, and school districts choose InjureFree as a trusted service provider when transitioning to more transparent, compliance-centric, modern service providers. Parents, athletic trainers, and organizational administrators for teams at all levels appreciate InjureFree’s simplistic interface in reporting injury incidents, while medical advisory committees and insurance providers access the robust dashboards aggregated in real-time. Inclusive of these, all-coordinated efforts result in higher retention rates, lower insurance costs, and a safer all-around playing environment.

CEO of InjureFree, Charlie Wund, says, “We’re excited to expand our network of partners dedicated to the health and safety of their participants. fusesport is a terrific collaborator and we are thrilled to work with Jeff and his team. The combination of our technologies provides immediate value and savings to any organization offering youth sport activities.”

The partnership translates into one of the most comprehensive youth sport management offerings to date, and includes a complete risk management platform in an ever-changing environment. From background checks, state and federal compliance tracking, injury incident reporting, and more, fusesport’s customers will have options to roll-out a full safety program, or choose from a la carte offerings.

Both organizations are excited by the marked health improvements a combined offering will have on the U.S. and global youth sports markets in the near future.
