ASHEVILLE, NC, USA, March 11, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- "All You Need Is Love" is a landmark production that first aired in the 1970s.

Director Tony Palmer's 17-part documentary covers the history of modern popular music, from its earliest origins through the mid-70s. Among the included genres are folk, ragtime, musical theatre, swing, jazz, blues and of course rock 'n' roll.

Palmer interviewed more than 300 subjects, and he enlisted the help of experts and personalities in the music field, including Stephen Sondheim, Leonard Feather and Nik Cohn, to provide the background for each episode. The documentary's title is taken from the 1967 Beatles song written by John Lennon, a friend of Tony's.

"There's no shortage of ambition in this 17-episode series directed in 1977 for British TV by music journalist and filmmaker Tony Palmer. Subtitled 'The Story of Popular Music,' this is the closest we will ever get to a definitive portrait of such a sprawling topic." - Sean Axmaker, MSN.com

"The idea of documenting the entire in-depth history of something as mercurial as popular music is the kind of epic task that could make even Ken Burns blanch. And yet that's exactly what British journalist and filmmaker Tony Palmer did in the mid-'70s, with the impossibly expansive 'All You Need Is Love: The Story of Popular Music.'" - Bilge Ebiri, TIME OUT NEW YORK

"Tony Palmer's 'All You Need Is Love' was hailed in its day and looks even better now, thanks to Palmer's blend of stock footage, electrifying performances and thoughtful narration." - Noel Murray, LA TIMES
