

REVOLT SUMMIT WINNER NIA SIMONE RELEASES NEW SINGLE “OH NO, NOT ME” – AN ANTHEM AMPLIFYING SELF-WORTH & EMPOWERMENT

At the peak of Women's History Month, Nia Simone, Revolt Summit winner, drops her first single “Oh No, Not Me”, an anthem inspiring empowerment and self-worth.

DALLAS, TEXAS, UNITED STATES, March 15, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Nia Simone, a multi-dimensional vocalist and winner of the 2021 Revolt TV Summit Talent Competition, announces the release of her first single “Oh No, Not Me”, available for download on all streaming platforms March 14, 2022.

I knew that I wanted a song that was empowering, relatable, and one that says I know my worth and I'm not going to settle. It could be for relationships or friendships -- Oh no, not me...not today.

The sultry anthem is a nod to self-empowerment, knowing your worth, with a dash of self-love and positivity. Showcasing a broad range of vocals and catchy lyrics, “Oh No, Not Me” is Simone’s first release following her spotlight at Revolt, and highly anticipated given the accolades she received from many legends in the industry. Touted as a “superstar” by 2-Time GRAMMY award-winning rapper Rapsody, Nia Simone is at the cusp of her career and ready for what lies ahead.

“I knew that I wanted a song that was very empowering, relatable, and one that says ‘I know my worth’ and ‘I’m not going to settle,’” the award-winning singer said. “It could be for relationships or friendships. It’s you saying, ‘No, we’re not going to do this’ and sticking firm to it. Like the song says, ‘Oh no, not me’, not today.”

Nia Simone cites influences from Beyonce, Whitney Houston, Tina Turner, Chloe and Halle, amongst others for her allure, with nods to R&B, Soul, Gospel, and many other genres of inspiration for her diversity of sound. A Dallas native and now Clark Atlanta University student, Nia Simone is artfully blooming into the artist she envisioned to be – one intuitively held since the adoring age of five.
