For the 5.5 million military caregivers nationwide, 37% are 30 or younger, with the average age of the people they are caring for being 27 years old. With only 50% of caregivers working to support their families, a 2011 report found an estimated $3 trillion lost when a caregiver leaves the workforce early due to caregiving responsibilities. This places many military families in a financial bind, and many struggle to find a balance between working, caregiving and maintaining a life of normalcy.

The transition from a military spouse to a caregiver is often sudden and unexpected. Because no spouse is prepared for the call that their loved one was injured, there are no pre-made plans to transition into the role of caregiver. A study by RAND Corporation found that 28% of caregivers quit their jobs entirely and 48% take unpaid time from work to care for their veteran. The abrupt change upends military family's lives, forcing them to shift their focus, priorities and forgo the daily routines they were used to.

"We are thrilled to offer our caregivers the opportunity to receive the education and training to start their new careers," says Gina Harrow, executive director of Yellow Ribbon Fund. "So many of these caregivers have put their veteran and their needs above their own. As a result, many caregivers do not have the experience or education to start a career that works with the busy schedule of being a military spouse and caregiver. We hope Yellow Ribbon Fund's scholarships help caregivers learn skills for their new career, be able to support their families and gain the financial security they have lost."

Empowering caregivers to launch a career that fits best with their lifestyle creates a path to career success that many often do not have the time to pursue. The Milspo Academy works with Yellow Ribbon Fund's caregivers to offer structured programs at a go-at-your-own-pace schedule. The academy's dedicated team ensures that each student is trained and certified, guiding them through the job-hunting process. Students are given real-world experience to develop talent and build a repertoire for interviewing with companies during the program.

Yellow Ribbon Fund's mission is to enhance and empower the lives of injured military members and their families by providing assistance programs and services that keep the family together during critical recuperation phases. By focusing on giving back to the community that gives their time and effort to care for others, the nonprofit utilizes the Career Development program to propel these caregivers into the next phase of their lives.

As one of the first veteran service organizations to include families within military care, Yellow Ribbon Fund has positively impacted the lives of thousands of injured military members and their families since 2005. Through its Crossroads, Keystone and Career Development Programs and partnerships with organizations like Milspo Academy powered by CareerDash., Yellow Ribbon Fund can identify supportive opportunities and serve the injured and wounded military community with necessities that uplift and improve their lives.
