and general business. Attendees will have an opportunity to network with speakers, sponsors, and other attendees. There will also be an exclusive session for CEOs.

“It is clear, especially now, that the world needs business leaders to join forces and leverage the incredible opportunities and responsibilities we have before us to make a positive impact in the lives of others. Not one single organization, entity, or individual can do it alone. As a company, it is important to stay focused on our own cultural journey while finding ways to support other businesses trying to develop healthy cultures, no matter where they are on their path. Every journey begins with finding and then committing to a purpose. We are energized by the opportunity to bring hundreds of leaders together for the Purpose Summit to focus on the importance of leadership and culture, and showing through real examples in business, how it can have a massive impact on the world. We know the summit will help business leaders better understand how to take intentional steps that will lead to the results so many of us want and so desperately need right now. One step at a time, we can easily demonstrate how business can help make the world a better place now and for generations to come,” said Jason Lippert, President and CEO of Lippert.

“Four years ago, when we started this journey, we knew that the currency of the workplace was rapidly shifting; that while compensation will always matter, finding purpose in our work matters now more than it ever has before. Our greatest responsibility as leaders is who we help others become. It is for this reason that hundreds of leaders from around the world are gathering at the Purpose Summit, to focus on how we can lead ourselves and lead others, so that we lead impact where it matters most together,” said Davin Salvagno, CEO and Founder of PurposePoint.

The summit will take place in various venues across the campus, including Notre Dame Stadium. Attendees will enjoy an under-the-lights evening reception inside the stadium and experience the historic college football venue.
