Global Tubeless Tire Market – Key Projections

- With more than three-fourth share, global sales of radial tubeless tires will procure highest revenues in the global tubeless tire market. While the report observes radials as top-selling products in the tubeless tire market, bias tires will also witness a steady growth in terms of demand.

- China, South Korea and India are among the key countries located in the Asia-Pacific excluding Japan (APEJ) region that are at the forefront of global automobile production. The demand for tubeless tires is anticipated to remain high in the APEJ region owing to the manufacturing presence of majority of leading automakers. The report anticipates that throughout the forecast period, the APEJ region will be observed as the largest market for tubeless tires.

- Sales of tubeless tires in the US and Canada is anticipated to gain traction pertaining to the positive attitudes of car owners towards performance driving. Towards the end of 2022, North America's tubeless tire market will have soared at the fastest pace, recording a CAGR of 7.3%.

- The tubeless tire market in Europe will also witness steady growth through 2022. Considering the rising demand for performance vehicles across European countries, this region will witness a persistent growth in demand for tubeless tires.

- In 2017, more than two-fifth of revenues procured from global sales of tubeless tires will be accounted by passenger cars. By the end of 2022, over US$ 86 Bn worth of tubeless tires will be sold globally for their use in passenger cars.

- In terms of distribution, aftermarkets for tubeless tires will be observed as the largest distribution network in the global market. Compared to the aftermarket sales of tubeless tire, OEMs will translate lesser revenues. Customization needs of vehicle owners will instrument the dominance of aftermarket sales in global distribution of tubeless tires.

- On the basis of technology, powered tubeless tires will procure a relatively lower revenue share, compared to standard tubeless tires. By the end of 2022, over US$ 38 Bn worth of tubeless tires developed powered air filling will be sold in the global market.
