Memories in the Past Continues in the Present, and He Learns Their Culture and History.

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, March 17, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Author Nwanganga Shields published her book titled Coming Back. It is about Clint, a new college graduate bound for law school, as his parents, a doctor, and attorney, expect. But Clint is dissatisfied with his life and becomes increasingly drawn to Nigeria, a country he visited once with his parents. Aro Chukwu people in Eastern Nigeria believe that death is not the end of life and that the person will return to the next generation to either relive his past life or live a better life than the previous one. This story is about one such return. Achi, a house slave at the beginning of the 20th century who died in the 1950s returns in the form of his American-born grandson, Clint who begins this quest to claim his heritage.

Excerpt from Coming Back.

“This story is strong on Nigerian history, culture and traditions and skillfully illustrates the divide between those who live a contemporary life in the U.S. and those who cling to traditional Nigerian traditions and customs. The main characters are layered and well-developed.” — BlueInk Review. Nwanganga Shields grew up in Nigeria and currently lives in Bethesda, Maryland. She studied at the University of St. Andrews and American University in Washington, D.C. She retired from the World bank. Her first book, Ejituru, was published in 2013.
