The growing usage of smart devices and the rising penetration of internet connectivity across countries are primarily driving the online grocery market. Besides this, the hectic work schedules of consumers, especially Millennials, and the expanding working population are further catalyzing the market growth. Moreover, the increasing popularity of e-commerce platforms and the shifting preferences among consumers towards hassle-free shopping experiences are also augmenting the global market. In addition to this, the inflating adoption of online sales channels by local stores and supermarket chains to expand their customer base and simplify the shopping experience for individuals is acting as another significant growth-inducing factor. Furthermore, online grocery channels offer various advantages, including express delivery options, accessible payment gateways, cashbacks, discounts, etc., which is also positively influencing the market growth. Apart from this, the incorporation of Big Data, IoT, AI, predictive analytics, and other advanced technologies to provide customers with a personalized shopping experience is anticipated to fuel the online grocery market over the forecasted period.
