"KCS has always been at the forefront of technology, accelerating innovation in the cloud for our customers. We recognize the expanding attack surface and ever-evolving threat vectors in the cloud-first world. This integration with Biarca empowers us to secure all combinations of hybrid, multi-cloud environments of our customers," said Vishal Shukla, CEO, KCS. He added, "I extend a warm welcome to the Biarca team. The globally distributed team and delivery centers are valuable assets for KCS. We can now meet our customers where they are. Especially, the presence of security specialists and industry thought leaders in North America allows us to work closely with our customers here to assess their current state of security, design and implement a robust security and compliance strategy, so they can shift focus back to what really matters – their business goals."

KCS has grown rapidly over the last 20 years, steadily expanding operations in multiple countries, adding new customer and partner logos, onboarding business leaders and tech experts, building competencies and expanding the services portfolio. It is now ready to move into the next orbit and give an exponential boost to its business with an inorganic growth strategy. With this strategic acquisition, the company is upbeat about opening doors to new markets, adding cloud security and compliance solutions to their portfolio, extending their delivery team and locations. With Biarca's rich experience in security operations, posture management and threat analytics, KCS will be rolling out a set of specialized cloud security services.

"We are excited to join KCS, a born-digital global company. We are glad that our new team is very similar to us in their commitment to service excellence and a growth mindset," said Subha Rajana, CEO, Biarca. She also noted, "We plan to build on the success Biarca has had in making the cloud secure for some of the most prestigious institutions and enterprises in North America. We look forward to continue to transform security for our joint customers in the future."
